

Security Personnel Training

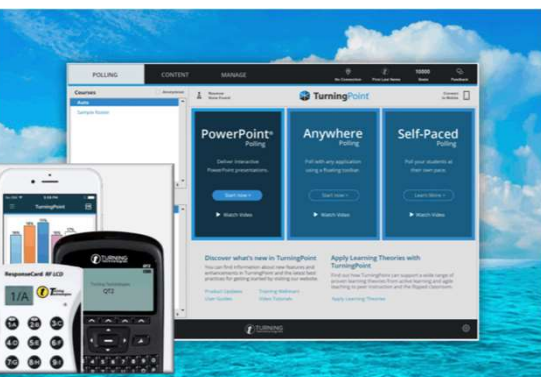

IMPROVE THE VIEW OF THE SECURITY BUSINESS - INCREASE YOUR BUSINESS

Security officers provide protective services that help to deter crime, ensure safety and enforce laws. Though training may be provided on-the-job, a growing number of states have implemented formal training standards and are requiring officers to become licensed. Security guards have a bad rep. Don't believe me? Think of the last movie you watched starting a security guard character. Let me help you out: Paul Blart (played by the festively plump, Kevin James) in Paul Blart: Mall Cop, Larry Daley (Ben Stiller) in Night At the Museum, Ronnie Barnhardt (Seth Rogen) in Observe and Report, or even the Killbots of Park Plaza Mall. All the above were portrayed as lazy, not smart, not good enough to be "real police", or just plain psychos.

But you and I know that is just ridiculous and a downright lie. Security guards have one of the toughest jobs there is with actual responsibility for crime prevention, not to mention human life. In Israel, security guards have saved countless lives during terrorist attacks. They wake up every morning and go to work at the frontline of the fight on terror.
